

Group 14 Rules and Expectations

Four ground rules for benefit

- Update group at least twice a week via text on any platform
- Give each person a chance to speak when they want to
- Critique the ideas, not the person
- Ask for help if needed

Three things that I've experienced in groups that I don't want to happen

- Bad communication. Can be prevented by sending messages or updates over text at least twice a week
- Minimal effort from certain members. Can be prevented by holding each other accountable and presenting updated information on a project.
- Last minute work. Can be prevented by not waiting until the last minute to work or add work to the project and by meeting throughout the week.

I function best in groups when group members regularly communicate throughout the week and actually show up to meetings or when we are working on something. Communication and time is the most important.

I really hope our group can find time to meetup during the week to work on the project instead of waiting until the last minute and communicate as often as possible.

Best day if we need to meet: Thursday after 12

Ryan Brodey will do final submission

Signature: Ryan Brodey

Signature: Anthony Do